

43 Months Since the Jan. 6 Attack on the Capitol

Tuesday, August 6, 2024, marks 43 months since the attack on the U.S. Capitol that disrupted a joint session of the U.S. Congress in the process of affirming the 2020 presidential election results. The government continues to investigate losses that resulted from the breach of the Capitol, including damage to the Capitol building and grounds, both inside and outside the building. As of October 14, 2022, the approximate losses suffered as a result of the siege at the Capitol totaled $2,881,360.20. That amount reflects, among other things, damage to the Capitol building and grounds and certain costs borne by the U.S. Capitol Police.

Under the continued leadership of the U.S. Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia and the FBI's Washington Field Office, the investigation and prosecution of those responsible for the attack continues to move forward at an unprecedented speed and scale. The Department of Justice's resolve to hold accountable those who committed crimes on January 6, 2021, has not, and will not, wane.

Based on the public court documents, below is a snapshot of the investigation as of the close of business on August 5, 2024. Complete versions of most of the public court documents used to compile these statistics are available on the Capitol Breach Investigation Resource Page at <https://www.justice.gov/usao-dc/capitol-breach-cases>.

Arrests made: More than 1,488 defendants have been charged in nearly all 50 states and the District of Columbia. (This includes those charged in both District and Superior Court).

Criminal charges:

Approximately 547 defendants have been charged with assaulting, resisting, or impeding officers or employees, including approximately 163 individuals who have been charged with using a deadly or dangerous weapon or causing serious bodily injury to an officer.

Approximately 140 police officers were assaulted on Jan. 6 at the Capitol, including about 80 from the U.S. Capitol Police and about 60 from the Metropolitan Police Department.

Approximately 11 individuals have been arrested on a series of charges that relate to assaulting a member of the media, or destroying their equipment, on Jan. 6

Approximately 1,417 defendants have been charged with entering or remaining in a restricted federal building or grounds. Of those, 171 defendants have been charged with entering a restricted area with a dangerous or deadly weapon.

Approximately 87 defendants have been charged with destruction of government property, and approximately 66 defendants have been charged with theft of government property.

There were roughly 259 defendants who were charged with corruptly obstructing, influencing, or impeding an official proceeding, or attempting to do so when the Supreme Court issued its opinion in Fischer v. United States, 23-5572, which narrowed the conduct that could violate the statute at issue, before remanding to the D.C. Circuit for further proceedings.

- Of these 259 defendants, approximately 133 have been sentenced.
 - 76 of the 133 were convicted of this offense and other felonies.
 - Roughly 40 of the 133 have been convicted of this charge and no other felony and received sentences of probation, completed their sentence, or have been released from incarceration pending the outcome of Fischer.
 - Approximately 17 of the 133 have been convicted of this charge and no other felony and are currently serving a sentence of incarceration.
 - Nearly all the remaining 126 defendants are on pretrial release while they are awaiting sentencing or pending trial. The limited number who are detained are generally charged with other felonies; serving sentences in other criminal matters; or have failed to comply with the terms of their pre-trial release.

The government will be reviewing individual cases against the standards articulated in Fischer, as well as the anticipated ongoing proceedings related to Fischer in the D.C. Circuit, to determine whether the government will proceed with the charge.

There are zero cases where a defendant was charged only with corruptly obstructing, influencing, or impeding an official proceeding, or attempting to do so. Every defendant also faces other criminal charges — felonies, misdemeanors, or both — for illegal conduct related to the Capitol Breach.

Pleas:

Approximately 894 individuals have pleaded guilty to a variety of federal charges, many of whom faced or will face incarceration at sentencing.

- o Approximately 288 have pleaded guilty to felonies. Another 606 have pleaded guilty to misdemeanors.

- o A total of 146 of those who have pleaded guilty to felonies have pleaded to federal charges of assaulting law enforcement officers. Approximately 76 additional defendants have pleaded guilty to feloniously obstructing, impeding, or interfering with a law enforcement officer during a civil disorder. Of these 222 defendants, 180 have now been sentenced to prison terms of up to 151 months.

- o Four of those who have pleaded guilty to felonies have pleaded guilty to the federal charge of seditious conspiracy.

Trials:

186 individuals have been found guilty at contested trials, including 3 who were found guilty in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. Another 37 individuals have been convicted following an agreed-upon set of facts.

Sentencings:

Approximately 944 defendants have had their cases adjudicated and received sentences for their criminal activity on Jan. 6. Approximately 562 have been sentenced to periods of incarceration. Approximately 172 defendants have been sentenced to a period of home detention, including approximately 31 who also were sentenced to a period of incarceration.

Public Assistance:

- Citizens from around the country have provided invaluable assistance in identifying individuals in connection with the Jan. 6 attack. The FBI continues to seek the public's help in identifying individuals believed to have committed violent acts on Capitol grounds.

- Additionally, the FBI currently has 10 videos of suspects wanted for violent assaults on federal officers, including (ONE) video of (TWO) suspects wanted for assaults on members of the media on January 6th and is seeking the public's help to identify them.
- Some of the violent offenders about whom the FBI is seeking public tips to identify or locate include Evan Neumann, Adam Villarreal, Paul Belosic, AFOs #91 and #383. AFO #91 uses what appears to be a stick to strike multiple officers numerous times while in the doorway of the Lower West Terrace, commonly referred to as the Tunnel. AFO #383 is shown on video charging at and assaulting officers, and appearing to grab and attempt to take possession of the officers' batons.
